Oscar Palacio: History Re-visited

At: Mills Gallery, Boston Center for the Arts, 539 Tremont St., through July 29.

Oscar Palacio's lyrical, haunting photographs, in a show in the Mills' project room, "History, Re-visited," consider how we construct history and offer it as solid and immutable in our monuments. Palacio goes to historic sites and photographs them in ways that reveal them as other than monumental. The mythic quality of the subject of "Plymouth Rock," for instance, shrivels when we see it through Palacio's eyes: It's just a rock behind a railing. —
